Coercion

Threats, blackmail

Human trafficking is the practice of exploiting, or taking advantage of, another person for labor (work) or sex in exchange for something of value* through the use of force, fraud, or coercion**.

*Something of value can include money, drugs, gift cards, beauty treatments, gifts, food, a safe place to stay, or other items that may be considered valuable

**In sex trafficking cases involving youth under age 18, force, fraud, and coercion do not need to be present

ABOUT US

Chemung County Safe Harbour is a program offered through a partnership with the Office of Children and Family Services and Chemung County that works to address human trafficking by providing the following services:

- technical assistance and consultation with service providers, such as therapists or caseworkers
- case management for survivors and those at risk
- trauma counseling
- forensic sexual assault exams
- linkage with shelter services, medical services, legal advocacy, or other community resources
- community education and awareness
- trainings for professionals and youth

OUR SERVICES

Trainings

Trainings are available for professionals, youth, and other community members. Love146 Not a Number training can be provided for free to give youth the tools to avoid being exploited.

Referrals

Referrals can be made for youth who might be in a trafficking situation. Youth who are vulnerable to being exploited can also be referred. A vulnerability is something that someone can use to take advantage of someone else. Youth who want more information can refer themselves as well.

Connections

Referrals can be made to other services, such as the Sexual Assault Resource Center (PPGNY), Child Advocacy Center, or to victim services through law enforcement.

The person doing the exploiting can be family, a friend, a romantic partner, or a stranger. Exploiters can use love, intimidation, or promises to care and provide emotional support to get someone to work or perform sexual acts.
